REWARDING EXCELLENCE

Culture depends on us — on how much we choose to nurture it, value it, and pass it on to future generations.

Supporting the Arts – Educating a Talented Ballerina

Training in ballet is both a joy and a major sacrifice. It is doubly demanding, as it involves attending regular secondary school in parallel with daily multi-hour dance classes, rehearsals, and performances.

Our call to action is for:

Leni de Andrea Ladišić, born in 2010. She is currently in her second year of training at the elite Joffrey Ballet School in New York. According to the school's estimate, the total annual costs of tuition, accommodation, and living in New York amount to 45,000 USD. Of that amount, 11,800 USD is covered by a scholarship, while the remaining 32,200 USD in actual yearly expenses is left for her parents to cover on their own.

We believe that together we can help make these financial demands more manageable.

Your support will go towards:

Your support will go towards:

- Tuition at the Joffrey Ballet School in New York City
- Tuition at the International Virtual Learning Academy
- Travel expenses

By contributing, you help Lena continue her education, nurture her talent, and pursue her dream.

We believe that supporting the growth and artistic journey of this young ballerina can be a shared mission, one that each of us can join in, according to our own means.
